

Spread Flavour Text

Root-Trunk-Branch

Intro Line

- "Let the cards settle. Like ash after a hearth fire... Let's see."
- "One for the dirt, one for the wood, one for the sky. Hold your breath."
- "The Cailleach herself couldn't untangle this in a day... but let us try."
- "Ah, the old canopy. Let's see which way the wind is blowing your leaves."
- "(runs a weathered thumb over the top card) Three parts to a life. Three weights to carry."
- "The roots always speak first. Silence now, let them grow."
- "Don't look at me like that. The timber doesn't lie, it just complains. Let's see what we have."
- "(stares into the middle distance) A tree doesn't grow overnight, and neither does a reckoning. Look here."

Positions

Root

Focus on the heavy, dark, damp earth, hidden histories, and things buried but still alive.

- "The roots go deep, down where the light is forgotten and the ancient things sleep."
- "What feeds you now was buried long ago under the moss and stone."
- "The root position, the foundation laid in silence, growing further down than up."
- "A shadow in the peat. You cannot know the height of the tree without knowing the dark that holds it."
- "The old ground. It remembers every winter you thought would never end."
- "Where it all began, choked in the cold soil, holding fast against the wind."
- "Roots, bloody roots. I believe in your fate. We don't need to fake"

Trunk

Focus on weather-beaten endurance, the weight of the moment, the thick bark, and holding steady.

- "The trunk bears the scar of every storm. It stands because it must."
- "The present hour—thick-skinned and weary, carrying the weight of the sky."
- "Here is the marrow of the thing. The steady, quiet struggle to remain."
- "Mottled with lichen and hardened by the gales. This is where you stand today."
- "The wood is heavy, ringed with years of survival. It does not bend easily."
- "The trunk position, the bridge between the forgotten dark below and the blinding grey above."

Branch

Focus on the reach, the shifting wind, the vulnerability of new growth, and the grey horizon.

- "The branches reach out, testing the cold mist for a promise of sun."
- "A fragile green against a heavy sky. It is a direction, not a destiny."

- "The branch position, where the wood grows thin and whispers to the incoming wind."
- "Reaching into the grey. It seeks what has not yet been named."
- "Where the tree ends and the wild air begins. It trembles, but it grows."
- "The tomorrow of it all. High up, swaying in the gale, looking for a way through."

Last Line

- "Press B to look upon the timber once more, or A to walk out of the woods. The ink has already dried."
- "B lets you linger under the branches. A steps back into the gale. The roots remain."
- "One last look at the cloth? Press B. Ready to carry the weight forward? Press A."
- "Press B to map the leaves again. Press A to let them fall. The book remembers what the wind forgets."
- "The tree is drawn. Press B to stay in its shadow, or A to leave it to the weather."
- "Press B to count the rings once more. Press A to move on. A weary traveler doesn't camp under the same bough forever."
- "The roots are set, the branches shaken. B to look again, A to walk away. You've carved it into the diary now anyway."
- "Leave the cloth to gather dust. Press B for a final glance, or A to move on. The forest doesn't follow you home."

Pentagram

In Scottish and Celtic folklore, the elements aren't gentle. They are the driving rain, the burning peat, the howling gale, and the heavy bog, all centered around the spirit (the soul).

Intro Line

- "Five corners to the world, five ways to complicate a perfectly good day. Let's see."
- "Air, earth, fire, water... and whatever it is you call a soul. Let's see how they clash."
- "(traces a star on the damp cloth) A heavy mix today. Mind you don't drown or burn before we finish."
- "The wind is howling, the peat is burning, and you're sitting there shivering. Let's look at the full mess."
- "Five cards. A proper handful of trouble. Let the elements speak, if they can hear each other over your sighing."
- "One for the spark, one for the wave, one for the dirt, one for the gale... and one for the ghost inside you."
- "Ah, the five-pointed dance. It's rarely a smooth jig. Sit back and let them settle."
- "If the Cailleach didn't want us playing with fire and water at the same time, she shouldn't have left the cards here."

Positions

Soul

Focus on the internal spark, the quiet center of the storm, the stubborn self, and the things that haunt or drive you.

- "The top of the star. The quiet, stubborn ghost that keeps the bones moving."
- "The soul position. The bit of you that stays awake when the lights go out."
- "The spark in the dark. It's a fragile thing to build a life around, but it's all you've got."
- "The core of it all. It's a bit bruised, a bit weary, but it refuses to go out."

- "Where you hide when the world gets too loud. Let's see what's lurking in the deep."
- "The breath inside the clay. The part of you that remembers who you were before the world told you who to be."

Air

Focus on thoughts, the cold wind, sharp clarity, anxiety, and things carried on the breeze.

- "The air position. A sharp wind off the firth, cutting through the nonsense to find the truth."
- "The thoughts you don't speak aloud. They carry weight, like a heavy morning mist over the glen."
- "A cold gale in the mind. It clears out the dead leaves, but it leaves you shivering."
- "The whisper in the heather. It's hard to tell if it's a warning or just the weather talking."
- "Where the thoughts swarm like midges. Let's see what's clouding your vision today."
- "The wind blows change, whether you've mended your roof or not. Best hold onto your hat."

Earth

Focus on practicalities, survival, the physical body, coin, and the stubborn realities that anchor you.

- "The earth position. The cold stone beneath your boots that doesn't care about your philosophy."
- "The mud and the coin. The heavy things that keep you tethered to the glen."
- "A bit of solid ground in a shifting world. Hard to dig, but hard to break."
- "The practical toll. Like trying to pull your boots out of a deep peat bog."
- "Where the roots meet the rock. It's not a soft bed, but it holds the walls up."
- "The material world—the bread on the table and the draft through the stones. Let's see what's weighing you down."

Fire

Focus on drive, passion, anger, the impulse to act, and the heat that either warms or destroys.

- "The fire position. A bright spark in a cold climate. Careful it doesn't burn the house down."
- "The heat in the blood. The old grudges and the new ambitions that keep you awake at night."
- "Like dry heather in a summer drought—one bad word and the whole hillside goes up."
- "The hearth fire. It keeps the frost away from your bones, but it demands constant feeding."
- "The impulse that drives you forward when common sense tells you to stay by the fire."
- "A flickering flame in a gale. It takes a lot of stubbornness to keep a light like that burning."

Water

Focus on feelings, intuition, tears, hidden depths, and the emotional currents you can't control.

- "The water position. A deep, dark loch. There's no knowing what's sitting at the bottom until you dive."
- "The emotional tide. It pulls at your ankles, trying to drag you out into the grey sea."
- "The heavy rain that soaks into the bones. Some days you just have to let yourself get wet."
- "The undercurrent. What the heart knows but the tongue is too stubborn to say aloud."
- "Like a freshwater spring hidden in the hills—sometimes it's pure, sometimes it's just mud and grief."
- "The tears and the tides. They come and go whether you give them permission or not."

Last Line

- "The elements have said their piece. Press B to look upon the clash once more, or A to let the dust settle."
- "Press B to linger in the storm. Press A to step back into the quiet world. The diary holds the balance now."
- "The circle is closing. Press B for one last look at the spark and the wave, or A to blow out the candle."
- "Press B to map the forces again. Press A to leave them to the wind. The ink knows what your soul decided."
- "The five paths are laid. Press B to count the costs once more, or A to put your boots back on the road."
- "A heavy brew, that one. Press B to stare into the cup again, or A to let it go cold. The book won't forget."
- "The rain has stopped and the fire is ash. B to look at the remains, A to move on."
- "Leave the cloth before the elements notice you're still watching. Press B for a final glance, or A to walk away."

Celtic Cross

Intro Lines

- "Ten cards. A full cross and a staff. You don't do things by halves, do you? Hold your breath."
- "(sighs heavily, dusting off the cloth)\nThe Auld Crois. Right, let's peel back the years and see what's eating you."
- "This is no casual glance, darling. This is a proper excavation. Let's see what we dig up."
- "The ancient pattern. Ten weights to carry, ten mirrors to look into. Try not to blink."
- "(lays the first two cards down with a soft slap)\nThe self and the stone that trips you up. Let's see how deep the knot goes."
- "Ten points of light, or ten shadows on the heather... depending on how lucky you feel today. Let's look."
- "You've brought the whole sky down onto my table. Fine, fine... let's untangle the mess."
- "The Celtic Cross. A heavy layout for a heavy heart. Let the cards talk, and don't interrupt them."

Positions

"Present Situation", "Problem", "Past", "Future", "Conscious", "Unconscious", "Your Influence", "External Influence", "Hopes and Fears", "Outcome"

Present Situation

Focus on the current moment, the immediate reality, the state of mind, and where your feet are planted right now.

- "The center of the cross. Exactly where your feet are planted today, mud and all."
- "The present hour. A snapshot of the creature sitting across from me, looking for answers."
- "Where you stand right now under the grey sky. This is the marrow of the current moment."
- "The immediate self. The shape you take when you stop running and just sit with the cards."
- "The current weather of your life. Let's see what kind of day you're having before we look at tomorrow."
- "The present position: the skin you're wearing and the breath you're holding right this second."

Problem

Focus on friction, the immediate challenge, what is blocking the path, and what must be resolved.

- "The card that crosses you. The loose stone on the ridge that's trying to break your ankle."
- "The problem position—the knot in the wood that stops the blade from cutting clean."
- "What's tripping you up. It's sitting right across your chest, making it hard to breathe."
- "The immediate wall. You won't get an inch further up the glen until you deal with this."
- "The friction. The thing that's currently making a mess of your best-laid plans."
- "The hurdle. A sharp bit of gorse in your boot that you can't ignore any longer."

Past

Focus on what has already happened, old foundations, and the history carrying them into this moment.

- "The past position. The tracks you left in the mud that brought you to my table."
- "What's already done and dusted. The old ground you've walked over to get here."
- "The history under the moss. You can't understand the harvest without looking at the winter before it."
- "The trail behind you. A long, weary road that's still sticking to the soles of your boots."
- "What has already been carved into the stone. It's behind your back, but its shadow is long."
- "The ghosts that laid the foundation. They've finished their work, but they're still hanging about."

Future

Focus on short-term momentum, the immediate horizon, and what is currently drifting toward you.

- "The future position. The next bend in the glen, just before the path drops out of sight."
- "The immediate tomorrow. The rain clouds gathering over the ridge, heading straight for us."
- "What's drifting toward you on the wind. It's not destiny yet, just the next card to play."
- "The short horizon. A glimpse of where you're walking if you don't change your stride."
- "The coming weather. It's hovering on the edge of the cloth, waiting for its turn."
- "The next step. The ground isn't quite solid yet, but you're about to put your weight on it."

Conscious

Focus on goals, assumptions, what is visible, and what the mind is stubborn about.

- "The conscious position. What you tell yourself when you're trying to fall asleep at night."
- "The front of the mind—the little lantern you're holding up to the dark, hoping it's enough."
- "What you think you're looking for. The loud thoughts that drown out the quiet truths."
- "The high ground of the mind. Where you stand when you're pretending to have a plan."
- "The story you're currently spinning about yourself. Let's see how true it actually is."
- "What's sitting right behind your eyes. The bright, busy thoughts that keep you from looking down."

Unconscious

Focus on hidden motives, repressed truths, ancestral weight, and the quiet forces driving the situation from the dark.

- "The unconscious position. What's digging its nails into your back while you're looking somewhere else."
- "The deep peat. The stuff buried so far down you forgot it was there, but it's still feeding the soil."
- "The hidden driver. The ghost in the cellar that's actually steering the ship."
- "What's whispering beneath the floorboards. The truth you only look at when the fire goes out."
- "The heavy undercurrent. The silent part of the heart that makes your decisions before your mind can object."
- "The dark water. You can pretend it's a smooth surface, but we both know something is moving down there."

Your Influence

Focus on self-perception, agency, personal boundaries, and the attitude you project into the situation.

- "Your influence position. The person you pretend to be when you walk into a crowded room."
- "The mirror. How you see your own reflection, and how much you blame it for the weather."
- "The shape of your own shadow. Are you making yourself smaller than you need to be?"
- "The armor you've put on for this fight. Careful it isn't too heavy for you to move in."
- "What you bring to the table. Your own stubbornness, your own pride, and the specific way you hold your jaw."
- "How you handle your own power. Whether you're steering the cart or just dragging your heels in the dirt."

External Influence

Focus on the surrounding environment, other people's actions, social pressures, and uncontrollable outside forces.

- "The world outside. The folk talking behind your back or the wind trying to rip the thatch off your roof."
- "The external influence position. The stage you're standing on and the crowd that's watching you stumble."
- "What the tide washed up on your doorstep. You didn't ask for it, but it's sitting there anyway."
- "The neighborhood. The pressures and parameters other people have built around your life."
- "The elements pressing in through the cracks. The things you cannot control, no matter how loud you shout."
- "The social climate. A cold draft coming under the door, straight from someone else's house."

Hopes and Fears

For Hopes and Fears (the trickiest position in the staff, where secret desires and late-night dread merge into one paradox), the focus is on the hesitation of the human heart. In our fortune teller's weary style, this is the place where you want the storm to break just so the waiting is over, or where you're terrified of getting exactly what you asked for.

Here are 6 short flavor text options for Hopes and Fears: Hopes and Fears (The Paradox / The Shiver)

Focus on hidden desires, self-sabotage, anxiety, and the strange way we long for the things we dread.

- "The hopes and the fears, because humans are foolish enough to pray for the storm just to end the drought."
- "What keeps you shivering by the fire. The thing you secretly crave, and the thing that keeps you awake at 3 AM."
- "The paradox. Sometimes the thing we're most terrified of is the very thing we need to open the door."
- "A nervous look at the horizon. You're scanning the hills for a savior, or a monster—and you aren't sure which is worse."
- "The secret wish and the silent dread, tangled up together like old briars in a ditch."
- "The position where the heart cheats. You want to win, but a part of you just wants to lie down in the heather and give up."

Outcome

Focus on the inevitable destination of current momentum, the final resolution, and the grand summary of the reading.

- "The outcome position. The place where all these muddy tracks finally converge at the top of the hill."
- "The final sum. Given the fire, the stone, and the rain... this is the crop you're likely to harvest."
- "The end of the staff. The quiet room at the end of a very long, loud day. Let's see what's waiting."
- "The ultimate resolution—the shape the clay takes when the wheel finally stops spinning."
- "Where the road drops you. It might not be where you wanted to go, but it's where your feet are heading."
- "The bottom line. The grand total of all your plans, your secrets, and your stumbles. Look close."

Last Lines

- "The grand cross is laid, and the staff is set. Press B to look upon the whole map once more, or A to roll up the cloth."
- "Ten mirrors are staring at you. Press B to look back into them, or A to throw a sheet over them and go get some air."
- "That's the whole story, cover to cover. Press B to flip through the pages again, or A to let the diary hold the weight now."
- "The cards have run out of breath and so have I. Press B to study the wreckage, or A to let the ink dry in peace."
- "The pattern is full. Press B to weigh the cross and the problem again, or A to walk out the door with what you know."
- "A rare bit of digging, that. Press B to stare down into the trench once more, or A to put the spade down and shut the book."
- "The ten points are settled. Press B to watch the shadows shift on the table, or A to blow out the light. Your call."
- "You've got your map of the glen—hazards and all. Press B to check the route again, or A to step back into the world."

Horoscope

Intro Lines

- "Twelve cards. The whole bloody sky smashed down onto my little cloth. Sit back, this is going to take a while."
- "(chuckles dryly, shuffling the full deck). Mapping the entire wheel, are we? Fine. Let's see which stars are doing the heavy lifting today."
- "A full astrological excavation. Twelve houses, twelve locks to pick. Let's see what's rattling inside them."
- "Twelve positions from Aries to the deep sea of Pisces. Don't look so nervous, darling—it's only the cosmos."
- "The grand carousel. Twelve mirrors arranged in a circle to catch you from every single angle. Nowhere to hide now."
- "(lays out the cards in a wide, sweeping circle). The great wheel turns, and here you are, stuck right in the middle of the machinery. Let's look."
- "Twelve weights to balance. It's a heavy sky you're carrying on your shoulders today. Let's see where the pressure is."
- "The full house. Your money, your secrets, your enemies, and your ego. All laid out like fish on a slab. Right, let's begin."

Positions

"Aries", "Taurus", "Gemini", "Cancer", "Leo", "Virgo", "Libra", "Scorpio", "Sagittarius", "Capricorn", "Aquarius", "Pisces" The Houses

Each card represents a "house." Each house is associated with an element, a tarot suit, a zodiac sign and the planet that rules that sign:

1st House— is identity. This is you – your personality, your physicality, how you look. Associations: Fire, Wands, Aries, Mars

2nd House— is resources. This is your self worth, your possessions, your money (& how you earn it). Associations: Earth, Pentacles, Taurus, Venus

3rd House— is communication and knowledge. What you know, your early learning style, your siblings, your neighbours, your short or routine journeys, your environment. Associations: Air, Swords, Gemini, Mercury

4th House— is Home & Family. This is where you live, your attachments, your roots, your structure, your history, your domestic life & your emotional security (or otherwise). Associations: Water, Cups, Cancer, the Moon

5th House— is Creativity & Children. The things we give birth to & take risks on. This is where we play, fall in love and create. Associations: Fire, Wands, Leo, the Sun

6th House— is Work & Service. This is your health (& habits), your responsibilities, the mundane work that you do & those who do work for you. Associations: Earth, Pentacles, Virgo, Mercury

7th House— is Relationships. This is where you interact with others- and how. Committed romantic or business partnerships...& openly declared enemies are represented here. Associations: Air, Swords, Libra, Venus

8th House— is Tough Stuff. This house represents the things we don't want to talk about- death, taxes, inheritances. It's also joint resources, other peoples money, sex & transformation. Associations: Water, Cups, Scorpio, Pluto*

9th House— is Expansion & Beliefs. This house is about expanding your mind, your horizons, your knowledge & your belief systems. It's religion, philosophy, travel, adventure, law and the learning we do because we want to. Associations: Fire, Wands, Sagittarius, Jupiter

10th House— is Career. This is your career, your reputation, you in the world, your public persona, your social responsibilities. Associations: Earth, Pentacles, Capricorn, Saturn

11th House— is Friends & Community. Here we find your hopes & dreams, your friends, your associations, & your social life. Associations: Air, Swords, Aquarius, Uranus*

12th House— is Secrets & Undoing. This is us in private. It's the things we keep locked away in the closet- the things that bring us undone. It's also karmic lessons, spirituality, where we escape and what we know subconsciously. Associations: Water, Cups, Pisces, Neptune*

Aries (Identity & The Self)

Focus on the core personality, physicality, outward ego, and the immediate impression made on the world.

- "The first house. Aries. This is the raw bone of who you are when you look in the mirror before anyone else wakes up."
- "The house of the self. Your immediate skin, your temper, and the face you put on when you're walking head-first into a gale."
- "Aries' corner. The ego, the spark, and the specific way you stomp into a room when you want to be noticed."
- "The first gate. Your identity—not the polite version you tell your mother, but the actual beast driving the cart."
- "The self position. It's your physical frame, your immediate defenses, and the sheer stubbornness that keeps you standing."
- "Aries rules the head. This is your initial footprint in the mud, your baseline, and the weapon you use to cut through the noise."

Taurus (Resources & Self-Worth)

Focus on possessions, material wealth, how you earn your bread, and what you truly value about yourself.

- "The second house. Taurus. This is your pocket, your pantry, and whether you've got enough coin to pay the ferryman."
- "The house of substance. What you actually own, what you cling to, and what you're willing to sweat for."
- "Taurus' corner. Your resources and your self-worth—because it's hard to feel like a king when your boots are letting in water."
- "The second gate. Your relationship with gold, greed, and the simple comfort of having a solid floor beneath your feet."
- "The material world. This card shows what you hold in your fists, and whether you're hoarding it out of fear or using it to build."
- "Taurus rules the throat and the purse. It's how you feed yourself, how you earn your keep, and what you think you're actually worth."

Gemini (Communication & Neighborhood)

Focus on the waking intellect, local networks, siblings, routine travel, and how you talk to the world around you.

- "The third house. Gemini. The wagging tongues, the local gossip, and the noise inside your immediate neighborhood."
- "The house of the mind's daily hustle. How you speak your peace, or how you twist your words when you're cornered."
- "Gemini's corner. The short journeys you take every day, and the casual acquaintances you tolerate on the road."
- "The third gate. Your early learning, your siblings, and the basic cleverness you use to navigate the daily grind."
- "The immediate environment. This is the air you breathe every day and the routine chatter that fills your ears."
- "Mercury's domain. The letters in your drawer, the texts on your screen, and the specific way your brain processes facts."

Cancer (Home, Family & Roots)

Focus on domestic life, family history, emotional security, and the private space where you retreat.

- "The fourth house. Cancer. The hearth, the history, and the old foundations under the floorboards of your house."
- "The house of roots. The people who made you, the blood in your veins, and the things you left behind in your childhood bedroom."
- "Cancer's corner. Your domestic life and your emotional safety—or the lack of it when the storm hits the roof."
- "The fourth gate. Where you go when you're bleeding and need to hide from the world for a wee while."
- "The private sanctuary. This card shows the shape of your nest, and whether it's a place of comfort or a cage of old habits."
- "The Moon's domain. It's your attachments, your family secrets, and the heavy emotional anchors that stop you from drifting away."

Leo (Creativity, Romance & Play)

Focus on self-expression, creative projects, romance, recreation, and the joy of taking a gamble.

- "The fifth house. Leo. This is your playground, your stage, and the specific way you make a fool of yourself when you fall in love."
- "The house of the spark. The things you give birth to, the art you create, and the risks you take just to feel alive."
- "Leo's corner. Pure romance and recreation—where you put down your heavy packages and just play for a wee while."
- "The fifth gate. Your inner theatre. It's how you shine, how you spend your luck, and what you do when the spotlight hits you."
- "The creative urge. This card shows the things you build out of nothing, and whether you're doing it for the joy or just for the applause."

- "The Sun's domain. Your inner child, your grand passions, and the reckless gambles of the heart that keep life from getting dull."

Virgo (The Grind, Responsibilities & Health)

Focus on daily routines, mundane work, physical well-being, habits, and serving others.

- "The sixth house. Virgo. The daily grind, the dirty dishes, and the small, boring habits that keep your body from falling apart."
- "The house of service. The mundane work you do to pay the rent, and the specific way you handle your daily chores."
- "Virgo's corner. Your health and your responsibilities—the heavy maintenance required to keep the machine running."
- "The sixth gate. Your daily routine. It's not the glamorous stuff; it's the quiet, repetitive labor that keeps the roof over your head."
- "The workshop of the soul. This card shows how you handle the details, the micro-problems, and the folk who rely on your labor."
- "Mercury's practical side. Your physical well-being, your nervous system, and whether you're driving yourself to an early grave with worry."

Libra (Partnerships & Open Enemies)

Focus on committed relationships, marriages, business contracts, legal bonds, and those who openly oppose you.

- "The seventh house. Libra. The person sitting right across the table from you—whether they're holding your hand or a knife."
- "The house of the mirror. The commitments you make to other folk, and the specific way you compromise your own ground to keep them."
- "Libra's corner. Partnerships and open enemies. Because sometimes, the person you argue with the most is the one you're locked in with."
- "The seventh gate. The legal contracts, the marriages, and the public rivalries that define how you play with others."
- "The scales of relation. This card shows what you demand from a partner, and what kind of reflection you're constantly chasing in their eyes."
- "Venus's social contract. How you handle intimacy, shared weight, and the beautiful, messy business of not being alone in the world."

Scorpio (The Deep Water & The Price to Pay)

Focus on joint resources, secrets, transformation, sex, mortality, and the heavy prices paid behind closed doors.

- "The eighth house. Scorpio. The things we don't talk about in polite company—death, taxes, other people's money, and raw desire."
- "The house of the deep current. What happens behind locked doors when the masks are off and the real bargaining begins."

- "Scorpio's own corner. The transformation house. It's about crisis, inheritance, and the specific way you burn your own house down just to rebuild it."
- "The eighth gate. Joint resources and shared debts. It shows what you owe to the dark, and what the dark owes to you."
- "The crucible. This card looks at the stuff that scares you—the power struggles, the secrets you guard, and the price of real intimacy."
- "Pluto's domain. It's the compost pile of the soul. The heavy, messy things that have to rot down before anything new can grow."

Sagittarius (The Long Road & Deep Wisdom)

Focus on higher education, long-distance travel, personal philosophy, law, and expanding your mental boundaries.

- "The ninth house. Sagittarius. The long road, the big sky, and the miles you travel just to escape your own mind."
- "The house of the horizon. Your personal philosophy—the things you believe in when the world gets dark and cynical."
- "Sagittarius's corner. Higher learning, deep books, and the laws you live by when nobody else is looking."
- "The ninth gate. Adventure and expansion. It's about packing a heavy bag, crossing the border, and seeking something bigger than yourself."
- "The grand map. This card shows your appetite for the truth, and whether you're chasing wisdom or just running away from the facts."
- "Jupiter's domain. The luck you find when you take a gamble on a completely new perspective, far away from your comfort zone."

Capricorn (The Peak, Reputation & Career)

Focus on public status, professional life, your legacy, social responsibilities, and how the world sees your success.

- "The tenth house. Capricorn. The peak of the sky. This is your public face, your career, and the reputation you leave trailing behind you like a shadow."
- "The house of the climb. How you stand in the world, the authorities you clash with, and the legacy you're sweating to build."
- "Capricorn's corner. Your social responsibilities—the heavy coat you have to wear when the public is watching your every move."
- "The tenth gate. Your calling. Not just the job that pays the rent, but the actual mark you want to leave on the stones before you go."
- "The public eye. This card shows how the village views you, your successes, and whether you're climbing the mountain for yourself or just to prove them wrong."
- "Saturn's domain. Structure, status, and the cold hard discipline required to make something of yourself when the wind is blowing against you."

Aquarius (The Collective, Friends & Dreams)

Focus on friendships, social networks, your community, humanitarian impulses, and your highest aspirations.

- "The eleventh house. Aquarius. Your tribe, your allies, and the people you gather around the fire when you can't face the world alone."
- "The house of alliances. The network you weave, the folk who have your back, and the collective noise of your social life."
- "Aquarius's corner. Your hopes, your grandest dreams, and the ideals you hold onto when everything else is falling apart."
- "The eleventh gate. The community you choose to build. It's about finding your odd little crew in a world that doesn't understand you."
- "The social fabric. This card shows how you fit into the crowd, what you give to the collective, and what they expect from you in return."
- "Uranus's territory. The lightning strikes of inspiration, your vision for the future, and the unconventional plans you're hatching."

Pisces

(Secrets, Spirituality & Self-Undoing)

Focus on the subconscious, private life, hidden motives, karmic lessons, and the ways we get in our own way.

- "The twelfth house. Pisces. The final room at the back of the house where you lock up everything you don't want the world to see."
- "The house of undoing. Your private vices, your hidden sorrows, and the specific way you trip over your own feet in the dark."
- "Pisces' corner. The deep fog of the subconscious. It's your dreams, your secrets, and the spiritual weight you carry when nobody is looking."
- "The final gate. The things that bring you undone. It's where you go to escape the noise, and where your own ghosts come out to play."
- "The hidden ledger. This card shows your blind spots, your private sacrifices, and the ancient karmic lessons you're still trying to clear."
- "Neptune's ocean. The place where all your boundaries dissolve. It's your intuition, your private grief, and the things you only confess to the wall."

Closing Lines

- "The great wheel has spun its full turn. Press B to look over the twelve houses once more, or A to let the dust settle on the sky."
- "Twelve mirrors, a perfect circle. Press B to stare back at your reflection from every angle, or A to pack away the glass."
- "The whole circus is out on the table now. Press B to review the machinery from Aries to Pisces, or A to blow out the candles."
- "That's the full map of your sky, corner to corner. Press B to recheck the hazards, or A to fold up the chart and walk away."
- "The twelve houses are locked and loaded. Press B to look through the keyholes again, or A to step back into the street."
- "The clock has struck twelve times. Press B to watch the shadows move on the wheel, or A to shut the book on this lifetime."
- "The cosmic ledger is full. Press B to weigh your money, your secrets, and your stars again, or A to leave the counting house."

- "The grand carousel has stopped spinning. Press B to ride the wheel one more time, or A to put your boots back on the solid earth."